Second Quarter 2026

As we navigate the middle of 2026, the Sydney property landscape continues to demonstrate remarkable resilience. While broader economic headwinds - including sustained interest rate stability following earlier monetary policy adjustments - have created a more considered buyer environment, quality family housing across the Hills District remains in extraordinarily high demand.

The Hills District continues to outperform many broader metropolitan pockets. Buyers are remaining active, drawn to our region's world-class school catchments, premier transport connectivity via the Sydney Metro, and lifestyle appeal. However, in today's price-sensitive climate, strategy and execution are the single greatest differentiators between an average result and a premium outcome.

Why Method of Sale Matters

A key trend defining the local market is the strong outperformance of auction campaigns over private treaty sales. Across 45-day, 60-day, and 90-day campaign metrics, auction campaigns have consistently delivered higher completion rates, shorter days on market, and superior competitive tension among qualified buyers.

Our structured auction process creates transparency and urgency that private treaties simply cannot replicate in the current market environment. The proof is in our results. Over the 12 months to June 2026, our agency achieved an outstanding 81.4% Auction Clearance Rate, significantly outperforming the wider Sydney metropolitan average of 63.5% over the same period.

Committed to Our Community

While delivering exceptional property outcomes for our clients remains our core operational focus, supporting our local community is equally vital to who we are. We are immensely proud of our ongoing partnerships with vital organisations such as Ronald McDonald House Greater Western Sydney, Vinnies North Parramatta, the Cancer Council, and local sporting and neighbourhood groups. Every transaction we complete allows us to continue giving back to the community that supports us.

Looking Ahead

Whether you are considering buying, selling, downsizing, or managing an investment portfolio in the Hills, having clear, data-driven insight is essential.

We invite you to explore the detailed suburb breakdowns and insights within this quarterly review. If you would like to discuss what these market conditions mean for your specific property goals, our team is always here to assist.

Moving Into a New Home?

Here's What to Do First (and Why You'll Thank Yourself Later)

There's nothing quite like the feeling of turning the key and stepping into a new place that's officially yours. The excitement, the possibilities... and yes, the slightly overwhelming list of things to organise. To make the transition smoother, here are a few essential steps to tick off as you settle in

1. Do a 'Fresh Start' Clean

Even if the property looks spotless, giving it your own once-over makes it feel truly new. Wipe down surfaces, check inside cupboards, and do a quick vacuum. It's also the perfect time to tackle corners and spaces that will soon be hidden behind furniture

2. Take Meter Readings Immediately

Before you get too comfortable, snap photos of your electricity, gas, and water meters. This protects you from being charged for usage before you moved in and makes setting up accounts with providers a breeze.

3. Walk Through and Inspect

Look at your new home with fresh eyes. Check all lights, taps, appliances, locks, and windows. If you're renting, note anything that was already damaged or worn. If you've purchased the property, this is the time to plan small repairs before life gets busy.

4. Change the Locks (If You Own the Property)

You never know who might still have a spare key—from previous owners to old tradespeople. A quick lock change gives you instant peace of mind.

5. Find the Important Stuff

Fuse box, water shut-off, smoke alarms—future you will be grateful.

6. Unpack the Essentials First

Bedding, toiletries, coffee supplies. Priorities.

7. Say a Quick Hello to the Neighbours

You never know who'll become your parcel-collecting hero.
